

GAMBLING ADDICTION

While traveling through the Netherlands, you decide to visit a horse-racing track. But what should've been a day of fun has become a real headache for one simple reason: The racetrack had slot machines. After spending an hour at the slots, you've squandered all the money you were carrying, including the €23 you need for your train ticket. Dejected, you trudge into the stadium proper and then promptly proceed to wager €21 – money you don't have – on the horse Een at about 5:1 odds.

Suddenly, you snap out of your trance. “No more bad decisions today,” you tell yourself. You’re not feeling too confident in your wager, and you’re certainly not eager to see what happens to patrons who can’t pay their debts. Perhaps you can gamble your way out of trouble.

A large screen displays thirty bets being offered to you. You take care to record the relevant information in your ledger, pictured below:
